Happy 2018 PAPORites!

I’m thrilled to be serving as PAPOR President this year. It’s great to take on this role with PAPOR being in such a strong, stable position as an organization thanks to the leadership and dedication of past presidents and previous councils. I hope we can maintain our strong position and continue past-president Benn Messer’s efforts to grow our membership and expand our reach across our region.

The (all-volunteer!) 2018 Executive Council enthusiastically hit the ground running at our first meeting in January. We are lucky to have many returning council members, some of whom are switching to new positions. I’m thankful for their continued service and the continuity it provides the organization. I’m also excited to welcome some new voices to council, including CiCi O’Donnell (Secretary), Samantha Bryant (Newsletter Editor), Lindsay Bayham (Student Representative), and (Past PAPOR President) Bob Davis (Short Course). You can learn more about each of us here.

We have a lot of great things in store for 2018, including some new and exciting events such as a party we’re organizing in Denver for AAPOR Conference attendees and an AAPOR webinar that will spotlight PAPOR. We’ll also be carrying on our traditional events like the MiniConference, the Annual PAPOR Conference in December, and the Student Paper Competition, among others.

In addition to these more formal networking and educational events, I would also like to help foster more causal get togethers on a local level. While we’ve only been able to gather the full membership a couple times year, we have many more opportunities to gather locally with fellow PAPOR members who live in similar metro areas. I will be kicking off this effort with a Bay Area happy hour. But, in order to have similar events in other areas, I’ll need your help! If you’re interested in getting together with local PAPOR members, let me know and I’m happy to assist in getting these more causal connections off the ground. To me, these events could have the double benefit of connecting people in local areas and helping to spread the word to bring more folks into the PAPOR community. I know I personally would enjoy seeing Bay Area PAPOR folks more than two or three times a year!

Last but not least, thanks to our 2017 sponsors! We can’t do what we do without our generous sponsors! We hope you will consider sponsoring us again in 2018.

We hope to see you personally or virtually at PAPOR events this year. And, please, help us spread the word and tell your friends about the number of activities we have going on. Follow us on Twitter (@PAPORorg) and LinkedIn, and be sure to share with PAPOR any news, developments, or events from your profession and research, or let us know what we can be doing better (president@papor.org).

Here’s to a fun and productive 2018!

Student Spotlight

2017 PAPOR Student Paper Competition Winners

Annually PAPOR sponsors the annual Student Paper Competition to encourage undergraduate and graduate student participation within the chapter and at our mini conference in December.

Mingnan Liu, PAPOR Student Paper Competition Chair, and three volunteers (Laura Wronski, Danell Brewster, and Paul Johnson) judged the 2017 paper submissions. The committee was very pleased with the quality of all submissions.

The students received their awards at the PAPOR conference last month. The 1st place paper is awarded a cash prize of $250, conference registration, up to $250 for travel expenses to attend the conference, an honorary one-year membership to PAPOR and a spot at the 2017 PAPOR conference to present research. This year the first place winner presented in Panel 1. The 2nd place winner receives a paid Conference Registration, an honorary one-year membership to PAPOR, and a spot on the PAPOR conference program. Unfortunately this year, our runner-up was not able to attend the conference.

First Place Winner

Becky Hofstein Grady,
UC Irvine
What is the best size for matrix-style questions in online surveys?

Becky Grady grew up in the suburbs of Chicago before moving to Houston to attend college at Rice University. She received her bachelor’s degree in Psychology, studying workplace behavior, stereotyping, and memory. Afterwards, she worked for two years as a psychology research coordinator at a Veterans Affairs hospital, working on helping patients make treatment decisions and improving the usability of patient and doctor forms.

Currently, she is living in Irvine, CA, working towards her PhD in social psychology at the University of California, Irvine with a focus on human biases. Her interest in surveys, decision-making, technology, and user experiences led her to an internship at SurveyMonkey, where she conducted the experiments presented in the paper regarding the use of matrix-style questions in online surveys.

Her goal is to help people have the best experience both designing and taking surveys to ensure that people can make better decisions with the best possible data. http://gradyr.weebly.com/

Runner-Up

Heather Hisako Kitada,
Oregon State University
The Implications of Functional Form Choice on Model Misspecification in Longitudinal Survey Mode Adjustments and Consideration of Underlying Trend

Heather is originally from Southern California, but has called Oregon home for the last ten years. She completed a Bachelors in Mathematics ('12) from Lewis & Clark College in Portland, Oregon before pursuing graduate studies at Oregon State University in Corvallis, Oregon where she earned a Masters of Science in Statistics ('14) and Graduate Certificate in College and University Teaching ('14).

She currently is a PhD candidate ('18 Expected) in the Statistics Department and graduate teaching assistant for the Graduate School at Oregon State. In addition, she is a Visiting Assistant Professor in the Mathematics Department at Reed College in Portland, Oregon.

Her research focuses on developing statistical adjustments for survey data with estimator instability and data quality issues due to measurement error with specific applications in mode effect. She enjoys being part of the AAPOR community and received a Student Travel Award for the 2016 conference in Austin, TX and was part of the winning Research Hack 3.0 team at the 2017 AAPOR conference in New Orleans, LA.

Here’s some of the great stuff we’ve have coming up for you this year.

Two opportunities to visit us in Denver
Since the AAPOR conference in Denver is in our region this year, PAPOR is organizing a party for conference attendees at an off-site venue for Thursday, May 17 at 8pm, complete with games, drinks, food, karaoke and photos! Mark your calendar so you don’t miss out on the fun!

You can also find us at the AAPOR conference chapter reception. We'll be providing some more information about PAPOR's events and a chance to win a nice raffle gift from one of PAPOR's members states. The chapter reception is a fun time to network and connect with other PAPORites.

Mini-conference
In case you miss the AAPOR conference in May or, like many attendees, didn't get to see all the sessions you wanted, be sure to sign up for PAPOR's Mini-Conference in late-June. A few PAPOR members who were at the AAPOR conference will present summaries of the various sessions they attended, providing a great opportunity to learn about topics and studies you may have missed at AAPOR. The MiniConference will be in or near San Francisco, and also available via webinar. PAPOR’s Mini-Conference Chair, David Kordus, will provide more details in the spring.

Short Course
PAPOR will be offering a Short Course in Los Angeles and via webinar this year. It's a great opportunity to brush up your research skills or learn about a new topic in public opinion research from an industry-leading professional. Bob Davis, the Short Course chair, will be planning and promoting the event. Stay tuned for info!

Student Paper Competition
Also in the summer and fall, student members and members who work with students are invited to participate in PAPOR's Annual Student Paper Competition. The lead author of a paper must be a student, and the competition provides a chance to win a cash prize, a slot and funds to present at PAPOR’s annual conference, and an annual PAPOR membership. Danell Brewster, the Student Paper Competition Chair, will send out flyers to students and universities this summer, and papers will be due in October, but it’s never too early to mark your calendar, spread the word, and start thinking about a paper to submit.

AAPOR Webinar – PAPOR Chapter Spotlight “Public Opinion of the Affordable Care Act: A Deeply Loved/Hated Law”
In July, PAPOR's very own Dr. Mollyann Brodie will discuss the past, current, and future of polling on the controversial Affordable Care Act and how the lessons learned during the past eight years may also prove useful in future polling on the seemingly ongoing health care legislative debates and other controversial laws in highly polarized political climates. We're excited to be partnering with AAPOR on this webinar to feature some of the great work being done in our region! (Full disclosure: I have the pleasure of working with Mollyann on this work!)

Annual PAPOR Conference
PAPOR’s last event of the year is the Annual Conference at the Marines' Memorial Club and Hotel in San Francisco, December 6-7. The conference is a great venue to present and learn about current public opinion research, network with local and regional professionals, and attend the two short courses for professional development. Jessica Gollaher, the Conference Chair, and Kelsey White, the Associate Chair, will start sending out information and requesting papers this summer.
